BLANCO

TEQUILA

Ah, the Blancos - the tequila babies (bebés) that haven't seen the inside of a barrel yet. They go by more names than a celebrity's child - Silver, Plata, Platinum, Crystal, and Platino. It's like their parents couldn't decide on just one name, so they gave them all the options. But hey, they say variety is the spice of life, right? And speaking of spice, these Blancos pack a punch. They're like a toddler on a sugar rush, with a robust agave flavor and enough kick to make you dance the salsa. Whether you're sipping it slow or mixing it up in a cocktail, these Blancos are a party in a bottle. And if you're feeling adventurous, try our Blanco flights and discover the unique personalities that come from different distillation methods. Who knows, you might just find your Blanco soulmate.

REPOSADO TEQUILA

Well, well, well, look who's taking a nap - it's the Reposados! These tequilas are the definition of "reposed," resting in their barrels for up to a year like they're on a luxury vacation. And let me tell you, that resting time does wonders for their complexion. The golden hue they develop is like the perfect tan - not too dark, not too light, just right. It's all thanks to those fancy barrels they're lounging in. Some like it new, some like it previously used, but either way, the barrel type is key to creating that unique Reposado flavor. Think of it like a spicy salsa mixed with a rich, oaky wine - it's a flavor explosion in your mouth. And like any good tequila, they're versatile-perfect on the rocks or mixed in a cocktail. So go ahead, give these Reposados a try, and maybe you'll find your new spirit animal.

AÑEJO TEQUILA

Oh, the Añejos - the wise, old tequilas who have seen and done it all. These tequilas are the grandparents of the bunch, aged for a minimum of 12 months, but sometimes up to three whole years! And they've got standards too - they won't settle for barrels larger than 600 liters. Talk about living their best life. With that extended aging time, these añejos have got all the color and flavor you could ask for. They're like the wise old owl of the tequila world - mellower and richer than their younger counterparts. They've got that golden hue that American whiskey lovers can appreciate, and their fruity agave notes have transformed into wood spice and sweetness. And when it comes to enjoying them, these Añejos are all about the slow burn. Sip them neat or on the rocks, and let those nuanced flavors really shine through. Who knows, maybe you'll learn a thing or two from these wise old tequilas.

TAQUERIA EXTRA AÑEJO TEQUILA

Ah, the extra or ultra añejo - the granddaddy of them all. It's like the fancy top hat of the tequila world, with a distinguished air that emerged in 2006. These tequilas are the true masters of patience, aged for over three long years. And you know what they say, patience is a virtue - or in this case, a taste bud tantalizer. These spirits boast the same meticulous production process as the regular ol' añejo, but with an added touch of sophistication. It's like they went to finishing school or something. With each passing year of aging, these tequilas transform into true works of art. It's like the tequila equivalent of Benjamin Button - getting better with age. So, if you're feeling extra fancy (or ultra-fancy, if you will), indulge in the refined world of extra or ultra añejo. It's like a VIP experience for your taste buds.

MEZCAL

TEQUILA

Listen up, amigos, because we're about to take a trip to the land of mezcal - the smoky, spicy spirit made from agave. Now, there are over 30 varieties of agave out there, but the most popular one for making mezcal is the Espadín. Tequila, on the other hand, is the diva of the mezcal family, only made from Blue Weber agave. And let me tell you, mezcal production is no mass-market operation. It's all about those small-batch, artisanal vibes, crafted in the little pueblos and villages of Oaxaca. That smoky flavor? It comes from roasting the agave piñas in underground ovens, which is like a BBQ for plants. And if tequila is the bourbon of the agave world, then mezcal is the rye - spicier and with more attitude. But don't let that scare you off.

TEQUILA

Hold on to your sombrero, because we're about to take a wild ride to Northern Mexico's other spirit: Sotol. This drink isn't made from the agave plant like its famous cousin tequila, but from the spiky and exotic sounding dasylirion plant, also known as the "desert spoon". It's like the plant said, "move over avocado, I'm the new toast-topper in town." Sotol is a true reflection of its environment, so if it grows in a forest or a desert, you can taste it in every sip. It's like a botanical chameleon, changing its flavor profile depending on what it had for breakfast. From mint to eucalyptus, this drink has more personality than a telenovela star. So, kick back with a glass on the rocks or take it neat, and let Sotol take you on a flavor journey that'll make you say, "Arribal!"
